1. Many men are being terrified by the huge disturbance in that province. For a wicked band of men is trying to stir up revolution.
 2. If only this republic would always remain! If only all the citizens would have great loyalty!
 3. Caesar led the army of the Roman people toward the battle lines of enemies.
 4. You were zealously seeking the consulship. For you were desiring to be a source of aid to the republic.
 5. If you write the history of the Roman people, in the senate you will be praised by all the senators.
 6. Which brave man shall we send toward that battle line? Who would dare to do brave deeds?
 7. To win the consulship is a difficult thing. For every Roman citizen desires to be a consul.
 8. The enemies were entirely fearing the fierce armies of the Roman people.
 9. If there should be a disturbance in this province and the citizens should stir up revolution, the brave consul will lead a band of soldiers into fierce battle.
 10. These disloyal men lack trustworthiness. Let them suffer a bitter death.
 11. If only our troops would fight in a battle line on behalf of the republic!
 12. My house was beautiful in appearance, unfortunate in fact/in respect to the real thing.

Exercises, Chapter IX (pages 395-411)

- A. 1. By order of the consul I shall lead the whole army with myself in order that the enemies may be driven into another place.
By order of the consul I was leading the whole army with myself in order that the enemies might be driven into other places.
2. Caesar urges his men that they not approach the enemy from the battle line.
Caesar had ordered his men at that time that they not flee out from the battle line.
 3. Those slaves had been working for (their) master for many years. And you often might have seen those men in the country or in the town. Now on account of their flight the master alone is trying to work in his (own) fields.
 4. Night departs, day returns, soldiers return to battle. Even for the conquered men courage returns in the mind.

5. Many things (indeed I shall confess [it]) we have managed in our consulship with you, senators, for this city and empire, for the life of the citizens, and for the republic.
6. Now let us obey our king who orders that we obtain arms and allies with which we may entirely conquer the army of the enemies.
7. The loyal man was always alone after the death of (his) wife whom alone he had loved; and indeed he felt no feelings of love after those ones.
8. Both Caesar and Antony desire power. If only you would grant it to neither, senators. This thing we ask on behalf of the freedom of the homeland.
9. No one captured in respect to (his) eyes (i.e. blind) would be able to go through the streets to the forum. Why would he dare to walk alone to any place?
10. Which man out of these (two) citizens seems to you loyal? The words and deeds of which of these (two) men would you praise? Never shall I give trust to Antony, as I have said before.
11. Some men were zealously urging me that I seek the consulship; others (were urging) Tiberius (to do so). Therefore I sent on account of friendship a man in order that he might tell these things to Antony.
12. On that very night I sent to death by order of the senators this public enemy desirous of revolution. And this man indeed would have dared to stir up war among the citizens in this republic if he had not been captured and killed without delay.
13. "I shall encourage the inhabitants of this land that they remain in the friendship of the Roman people." And this thing Caesar often used to say to his own soldiers.
14. That contemptible man who lacks trustworthiness and courage has been seeking the consulship for much time. If, however, he should receive it, all men in the state will be terrified by a great disturbance.
15. After there was an ordering/it was ordered that all men fight in front of the walls, with what spirit, I ask you, were you able to endure your own serious fear? For me, at least, at that time the mind was remaining the same; (my) zeal for war was huge. Many men, however, driven off by the enemies, were fleeing without law.
16. "You love the same woman who loves you."
"Lucky is he who is pleasing to that woman/her whom he loves."
"However, that fickle brother of yours, who loves one woman, holds another woman, is without trustworthiness."
17. In appearance our men had conquered, in fact, however, they had been conquered. So they would have admitted if they had not been moved by fear of punishment. Not even the consul at any time dared to say true things.
18. "What was the fate for those men who were led by Caesar into serious war?"
"Some were killed in battle, others presently will return home."
19. When I was in the province, I often remembered you only. There was, however, nothing (of) new that I might write or ask from you.
20. Who, I ask you, made that poem about the nature of things that I have been reading for many days and nights? This thing, at least, I have understood: by nature and by their own disposition all things live and are moved.

21. I shall say these things with a clear voice in order that you may be able, O allies, to hear me easily. Neither are we able to conquer the enemies nor any longer is any safety being granted by the good gods. Therefore I order you that you flee. At this time, at least, you are not able to do otherwise.
22. For the whole day I had been remaining at home in order that I might not be seen by enemies in the city. If indeed I had been seen by them, I would have endured bad things. Not even with a sword was I daring to go from home.
23. Marcus said to his brother: "Which of us will be chosen consul? You certainly are well pleasing to the people, to me many men in the senate are friendly." Neither man, however, won the consulship.
24. Unless we form a plan soon, we shall be overcome by an army of slaves. If only the consul himself would come from Rome within a few days with a great band of strong soldiers in order that he may order those contemptible men that they set aside (their) weapons and obey the opinions and orders of the Roman people.
25. I drove/have driven every animal out from the fields although it was a difficult thing. For soon a band of fierce enemies will return with arms.
26. You passed that law in your consulship that you yourself now do not obey. Therefore I advise that you go away into exile.
27. After the consuls returned from battle, by order of the senate they had been led into the forum where/in order that there they might be publicly praised for their accomplishments.
28. Who of men are you? For never before have I come to Rome, and I have not seen you before this day ever with my own eyes.
29. All men seek glory, one in one way, another in another way. Therefore I shall dare to say in the senate (my) opinion about the virtues of Catiline. If the senators feel otherwise, I shall faithfully pay the ordered penalty.
30. At what time of the year did the inhabitants of the province endure disturbances of the earth? Will no one tell me about this thing?
31. I have already tested the natural talent of this poet and (his) skill. Therefore I have asked from him that he hand down the accomplishments of my consulship with trustworthiness and care. Immortal gods, if only he would not do otherwise!
32. We came to Rome, and at the same time Caesar came with us in order that he might speak in the senate about (his) accomplishments in peace and war.
33. Who ever in other lands would endure the exiles and flights of many loyal citizens? Why in this city do many mortals endure these things?
34. Jupiter, listen to me myself—if you are able to be moved by any words. From you I dutifully ask that you grant favor and that you drive all dangers away from me and my men.
35. If the fates should call you, not by any strength will you flee (out) from death. One man has tried one thing, another man another thing. No one has ever been able (to do this).
36. That bold man, who at my order had been driven into exile, had been wandering for many years. For no cities were receiving him, no city walls. On account of this thing he killed himself by his own hand.

37. During the delays of the senate I was warning the consul that he be/to be a source of aid to the citizens. However, he was responding nothing to me. For in fact he was already preparing flight away from the city on that very night for himself and his own people.
38. Never before this time did the inhabitants of any province drive an army of the Roman people away from their fields. And about these things at Rome some things were were said by one man, other things by another man. The consul finally sent (his) only son in order that he might lead to that war auxiliary troops sent by the allies.
39. "If after these things I should have a good reputation, I would be happy."
"Your accomplishments through all the years, as it seems to me, at least, the senate and the Roman people will remember."
40. At this very time the allies are being driven into harsh slavery, great king. Us, at least, fortunate men, you already freed from this evil. For in fact with the sharp edge of your mind you had seen the power and nature of all things.
41. These things, my fellow citizens, I ask: who prepared treachery for the consul? At what time and in what way? Was he trying to stir up revolution? Certainly no one of you would have dared that thing.
42. Great at that time were the accomplishments not only of the soldiers but also of the citizens. To one and the same zeal and trick all men gave themselves: to make treachery with false words in order that they might entirely overcome the enemies.
43. The courage of one man was a source of aid and safety to the Roman citizens. And from this cause the whole city was freed from fear. The joy was huge for other men, for me before all (men); for that man was my son.
44. After Caesar came into the province, some states were desiring to obey the authority of the Roman people, others had already taken up arms and were seeking battles. And when these things were entirely understood, Caesar ordered the whole army that it prepare/to prepare for war.
45. In the forum I said the same thing to my fellow citizens that (I had said) to you (pl.) in the senate: "If you (pl.) send troops to the province with Caesar, you will stir up enmity and hatreds among the peoples of the whole province. How will you be able to endure the ill-will of the allies also?"
46. This famous man was driven out from Italy by your order in order that he might not any longer be seen by the eyes of any Roman citizen. And indeed he was being sent to where he might live alone without friends and might be without all good things.
47. You have said these things seriously and well. I for my part feel otherwise. I advise that we send this soldier alone at night in order that he may kill the king himself by his own hand. In this way indeed the enemies might fight among themselves.
48. Will you allow him to go into exile who was stirring up revolution among the citizens, who was trying to kill the consul, who was entirely conducting himself in order that he might win the consulship for his very self? What, then, of evil did he not both say and do?
49. Often the mind errs; but I saw this thing with my own eyes: our men, although on that day there was fierce fighting being done, in no way were able to be overcome by the enemies.
50. I for my part shall send a reliable band through the countryside; I shall order the same men that they search for disloyal citizens and bring them to Rome.

51. Trivial to the citizens this danger of war (was seeming), to the consul alone (it) was seeming serious. Therefore he advised the soldiers that they obtain war.
52. Let us urge these wretched slaves that they not obey any of (their) masters. No slave ever has not desired to be freed.
53. The citizens were differing much in opinion. Some were desiring to follow Catiline, others were urging that the very man be captured without delay. Otherwise, however, it pleased the senate (i.e. the senate decided).
54. After the whole republic finally went into the right of a few men, there was in the senate not even an appearance of freedom. For the senators had given (their) loyalty to one man, were being obedient to one man.
55. On that day I went to the forum and sought a place from where I might be able to hear clearly the words of the consuls. And indeed they advised the populace that it not at all fear a disturbance of the allies.
56. In uncertain situations Cicero did not seek (a place) where he might live without danger, but (he sought a place) from where he might be able to be a source of aid to the citizens.
57. As you have many friends, so (you have) not few enemies. If the latter men should try to drive you out from the senate, the former men will certainly bring aid to you.

On account of the war in the provinces aid had to be sought by our men.
10. active periphrastic
Are you going to sing your new song in the forum, Vergil?
11. active periphrastic
The senate on account of ill-will is going to drive Cicero into exile.
12. passive periphrastics
There will have to be a fleeing from Rome without delay or there will have to be dying in this place.
13. active periphrastic
If you should be going to fight in a war, my Lucius, you would desire a big sword.
14. passive periphrastic
If war were having to be waged, would you (pl.) be seeking new weapons?
15. active periphrastic
If you are not going to say a good word, say no (word) to me.
16. passive periphrastic
If you yourself had not done that deed (of yours), it would have had to be done by me.
17. passive periphrastic
Although there must now be a coming to Rome by all good men, I am remaining at home.
18. active periphrastic
You are telling me that which is not and was not and will not be (is not going to be).

Exercises, Chapter X (pages 441-456)

- A. 1. Using wisdom and courage on behalf of the republic, we did not suffer the violence of Catiline. And after this man indeed was killed, peace endured, the state endured, the Roman people endured. Who is there who would not admit these things?
2. I was walking through the middle of the city, pondering trivial things with myself, as is my custom. I saw Marcus standing in the forum with (his) wife, and I greeted them.
3. These captured slaves do not have any hope of freedom unless through flight. On account of this reason let them/may they dare to go away out from this land!
4. Many men abandoned the town during the battle. The lieutenant of good and honorable character would never have done that thing, not even having been ordered by Caesar. For with the enemies attacking, he did not go away from that place. Moreover, he ordered his men to stand fast in the battle line and fight.
5. Many and beautiful animals, O immortal gods, will fall before your altars if you lead us without misfortune through the middle of the enemies, through every hardship. By/Because of your favor, Jupiter, we shall be saved.
6. To us at this time there is a need of a keen mind. For it is difficult, I say, to understand these things, and the eyes are not able to come to know the nature of things.
7. Since the consuls had set out into the province with the army, the unfortunate city was destroyed by attacking enemies; the inhabitants also fell by their arms. If, however, the honorable soldier had been able to recognize the body of the king, he certainly would have handed it over to his son after the war.

8. Our queen has a just soul. For in fact she considers both free men and slaves (as) friends. To no one of men is she unjust. To all men, on the contrary, the king seems to be of a hard heart.
9. Lucius was a soldier without courage. For while (he was) fighting in front of the walls, he was being greatly terrified. He dared not any brave deed ever. Even now he remembers no battle line unless one (of the sort) from which he fled.
10. A certain man of ancient character must be sought in order that he may rule the people greatly desiring a revolution. If contrary to the hope of all men this man should make an end to war among the citizens, a new state indeed would be able to be born.
11. A certain legate by order of Caesar will set out to Rome within one day where/in order that there he may report the words of the leader to the senate. And indeed while going through the province he will endure many dangers.
12. You will free me from great fear, Catiline, if you go into exile. Therefore the consul advises you that you depart without delay. Let also depart that band of yours of wicked men, your comrades indeed. If only you would obey the word and authority of the consul!
13. Although our men were trying with great effort to hold the ordered places, the enemies nevertheless were able to attack and destroy the walls. In the middle of the night, moreover, the fall of the city was reported to all the citizens.
14. You always, Lucius Sergius, with certain unjust citizens used to make treachery against the republic. And this thing was sufficiently clear to blind men, as they say. On account of my diligence and the power and courage of the senate you were not able to set yourself in motion against good men.
15. Although many enemies had been captured or killed in that battle, the leader of brave heart was nevertheless not able to follow others who were fleeing using the sea.
16. The leader called the men to himself: "Before (your) eyes and between (your) hands," he says, are all your things/possessions. You are not able to flee, and there will not be any hope of safety unless you drive the enemies out from the homeland. About these things enough has been said."
17. You on account of your talent and wisdom might be able to make a speech in the presence of the senate. I, at least, because of fear would not dare (to do so).
18. If my brother should fall gloriously while standing in the middle of the battle line, all men will remember the fame of his fall. So it will always be for brave men.
19. As this soldier uses weapons, so you also use them. To me, at least, there is need of neither violence nor a sword. I myself shall be able to save myself with words, which alone will be weapons for me.
20. In this way that famous orator used to warn when he was making a speech in the presence of the senators: "If we do not seek peace without delay from the enemies, neither the city nor any home will be able to stand. For there is a certain reliable law (of the sort) that all men know: nothing is left for conquered men."
21. One way through the territory of the enemies was being left, (of the sort) by which our men were not able to go because of fear of an ambush. Therefore they returned into familiar places.

22. I urge you, my man, that you keep hope and faith. Aid, in my opinion, at least, will be brought by those gods to whom loyal men are a source of concern. Always they have saved and will save us.
23. Courage lives beneath your chest, brother Quintus. For when other men were fleeing because of fear, you alone with a calm spirit were daring to remain in Rome. When the citizens were finally fighting in the middle of the city, rightly you set out to Athens.
24. That speaker well-known to all men attacked the honorable consul contrary to custom since he had previously seen him in the senate with a sword. For force and arms were a source of great fear to the senators.
25. Caesar before the battle led his men to a certain place from where/in order that from there the enemies might easily be attacked.
26. This honorable legate, since his character was sufficiently well-known, I had ordered that he go on behalf of the Roman people to Carthage where/in order that there he might seek peace from the queen.
27. When Cicero was speaking in the presence of the people, he was not using the same words that (he had used) before the senate. However, he gave an opinion of the same kind.
28. When the soldiers had been called into the same place, Caesar led them after the battle into the territory of those states whose loyalty he had previously experienced.
29. Because the leader was perceiving danger, he led all the troops into one place and sent a lieutenant of good faith in order that he might learn the plans of the enemies. And when that man had learned all these (plans), he reported (them) faithfully to the leader.
30. If you should be going to make a speech in the presence of the senate, you would need not an abundance but a certain limit of words.
31. I shall say, senators, familiar things with familiar words. Catiline himself on this very day must be driven out from the city. That is a plan (of the sort) that the senate is not able to be without. For if this unjust and wicked man remains in the republic, there will be no one who would not greatly fear for himself and his own men.
32. Why did you say those contemptible unjust words against the republic? There is no human being (of the sort) who does not greatly hate a speech of that kind. To the people, moreover, that speech that you are going to use in the presence of the senate will not be pleasing.
33. With Augustus having died, some citizens (were fearing) the fates of the gods, others were fearing the tricks of a woman. And when the end of this man had been reported in the presence of the senate, many things on behalf of (his) life and accomplishments were said. Certain men spoke in opposition.
34. Many hardships on land and sea I have endured; now not without great hope I have come to a new land with my sons. The customs of the inhabitants who occupy these places will have to be learned by us.
35. Endure, great friend, and listen to me. For I know you well, and to you I am going to say words of great wisdom: you must not be conquered by Love, a harsh god indeed. For nature has given to man a mind with which the heart may be ruled.
36. The soldiers use animals with which they carry arms and other things. Who is there (of the sort) who does not know this thing?

37. That speech of yours, son Marcus, you made justly in the presence of the people. Soon you will be received among the good orators.
38. If only that famous Tullius, a speaker of great natural talent, would speak against the opinion of Antonius! In this way he might save the republic. And indeed he is the only one who would be able to accomplish this work.
39. Come to Athens where you may come to know the wisdom and customs of ancient men. And when these things have been understood, you could conduct a happy life.
40. "Nothing, with me being the leader/if I am the leader, ever of evil things will you suffer, brave men. For when the enemies were attacking the city, by your strength, by your courage we were saved."
41. I was not able to see your son because he had already set out to the battle line. I consider that man, however, in the place of a brother, who was born from you, who has your character. Saved from the hands of the enemies, may he return home!
42. Why are you afraid, Marcus Tullius? Now (there is need of) strong feelings, now there is need of a bold heart. For the danger is known to you, and by you only many things will have to be endured.
43. Of their own kind are animals; we also (are of our own kind). For in fact you might be able to come to know a man, (but) not all men. Certain gods with the mind we recognize although we are not able to see them themselves. If only we truly were able (to do so)!
44. When Pompey and Crassus were the consuls, Caesar prepared to lead a Roman army into the territory of the enemies. When his plan was known, it was enough for the inhabitants to flee to another place.
45. If only a certain man would make an end of hardships and dangers! If by a gift of the gods this thing should be granted to me, (my) joy will be huge.
46. Nature gave hands to a human being with which he might be able to hold weapons. Not that thing entirely is read in (the works of) Cicero, but words of this kind.
47. You easily could have perceived the unfortunate fall of our city. For enemies were destroying it entirely after it was captured through treachery. The inhabitants either had fled or were wretchedly being killed. One boy of ten years was able to be saved.
48. Friendship is born among men of great virtue, but by deeds not by words you could well recognize a friend. Friendship, moreover, must be sought for itself and through itself. I had these things to say (in order that I might say) about friendship. Now I am making an end of my speech.
49. This town, although all the inhabitants fought fiercely, was captured by force and destroyed, and all the things (of the sort) that were able to be a source of aid to a city were carried back to Carthage from that place. My son fell also in the battle line.
- B. 1. Sī verbīs ācribus opus esset, cōsulēs quendam ōrātōrem nōn solum ingentī ingeniō sed etiam magnā arte vocārent. Nunc contrā in rē huius generis nihil dictūrī sumus.
2. Tū apud senātum dīcēs ōrātiōnem honestam dē gravī cāsū illius urbis pulchrae sociōrum habeās. Eō modō multī cīvēs miserī ē periculō mortis servātī sint.
3. Quis est quī moenia propter īnsidiās paucōrum impiōrum dēlērī patiātur? Sī mīlitēs nostrī fortiter pugnāverint/Militibus nostrīs fortiter pugnātibus, urbs nōn cadet!

4. Quamquam multī nostrum mortem rēgis honestī magnopere timēbant/Multīs . . . timentibus), lēgātus quīdam nōtae fideī vēra rettulit: ille dux Rōmam cum suō nātō ante proelium profectus erat servātus.
5. Mōrēs illius generis inimicī nōscāmus; namque ex inimicitīā nāscātur magna amīcītia.
6. Perfer, amīce! Īmus quidem quō libertāte ac iūre aequō ūtāmur. Nihil perficiētur sine magnō labōre!
7. Mediā nocte nātus ducis nōtī iam in proeliō interfectī ad oppidum vēnit et gravia dē hostibus oppugnantibus rettulit. Ob eam causam arma proeliō futūrō omnibus virīs paranda erant.
8. Utinam meam ōrātiōnem prō cōsulātū Cicerōnis habitam audīvissēs! Erat enim ōrātiō quam omnēs hominēs aequī laudārent.
9. Quiddam infēlix mihi cīvēs monentī est relātum: urbs sociōrum nostrōrum ab hostibus oppugnāta servārī nōn potuit.

 - You need more (of) courage, my Lucius. Dare to fight (by) much more bravely.
virtūtis, Partitive Genitive; multō, Ablative of Degree of Difference
 - Nothing is worse than very bitter death. Let us flee from the battle as soon as possible!
morte, Ablative of Comparison
 - All men know that the word is stronger than the sword.
 - By far/By much the most difficult thing is to understand the words of that poet.
multō, Ablative of Degree of Difference
- B.
- Depart (pl.) as soon as possible! For the city has been captured.
 - Who is more loving of the country than that very good citizen?

3. Our soldiers have been sent into very fierce war. If only they would fight as bravely as possible!
4. Enemies are attacking the very small town with the greatest force.
5. I shall work with you in order that by that (degree) more easily these things may be accomplished.
6. Although we have many things, we desire more things.
7. Lucius sings better than I; for he has a better song.
8. Since the friendship of the gods is a gift as good as possible, I was very humbly seeking aid from them.
9. You will be much happier at Rome than in the country.
10. The custom of the ancestors must be followed by us.
11. Nothing is more similar to wisdom than the plans of the gods.
12. Slaves live more miserably than free men. And indeed the life of a slave is very miserable.
13. Fight well, O men, in order that by that (degree) you may win more (of) glory.

Exercises, Chapter XI (pages 485-497)

- A.
1. There are those (of the sort) who are accustomed to think(ing) that most of men use money for good. If only they themselves were using it better!
 2. As brave as possible against the well-known boldness of Catiline was Marcus Tullius. When the treachery of the former man had been learned, the latter man felt that the republic would be in huge danger. Therefore he summoned the senators as soon as possible to the temple of Jupiter.
 3. Too little dutifully you (pl.) sought aid from the god with gifts placed on the altar. Therefore, too little of aid he gave.
 4. Bravely I was leading (drawing) the spear out from (my) body although the feeling was sharp. If only that contemptible spear had not found miserable me!
 5. The enemies were throwing many spears into the middle of the troops down from the top of wall. Our men, in turn, because of a huge fear of death were fleeing. If only they had stood fast in the battle line!
 6. The very loving father fears for this boy, who is much dearer to him than life. In this way he shows that he is most honorable.
 7. I for my part during the disturbances of the citizens left the faction of Caesar. They say that you, since in those times you always remained in the same opinion, were wiser than I.
 8. Cicero used to think that friendship was born among men of the highest indeed virtue. And indeed who is there who would differ from this opinion?
 9. (My) father a little before (his) death gave me this sword which he was accustomed to say(ing) he had used well in many battles.

10. Either because of a certain chance or because of fate that long spear sent by an enemy found you. Now use it well and accomplish a thing of great labor. I say these things to you in order that you may fight with a spirit by this degree greater.
11. With the signal having been given at dawn, the soldiers were sending (their) spears far. We were knowing that they in a short time would/were going to dare to stand facing the enemy and to fight with swords in hand.
12. The citizens were uttering harsh things about the consuls among themselves and among the allies. There was more (of) ill-will than (of) wisdom in their words.
13. Because the words of the commander had been too little understood, the legions were believing that the enemies had attacked the camp in the middle of the night. But certain wiser men were saying that they were preparing to attack at dawn.
14. If we were standing on the plain with the leader, both the battle lines of enemies and the standards of our men we would be able to see more easily. Now (As it is) we see too little down from the walls.
15. That town even without a wall was not at all fearing war because the citizens had very many weapons and very great boldness.
16. Although the leader of the people was desiring in/with (his) great heart to establish walls and give his people a city, nevertheless on account of the anger of Juno he was not able (to do these things).
17. Cicero was perceiving that Catiline had to be driven into exile. With a long speech having been made in the presence of the senate, Catiline answered these things as brief as possible with a clear voice: "I am going to go." But there was a little (of) delay for him; for Cicero was still alive.
18. A little after the war inhabitants of rather humble indeed fortune were killed, other more honorable men were sent far out from the province.
19. Gaius boldly threw himself into the deep sea. For he was trying to save the life of the consul, thinking that he would obtain great glory. And after this very brave deed he perished miserably.
20. Our fathers and ancestors used to establish walls as great as possible in order that by them the inhabitants might be saved from dangers. Therefore, let us establish walls as strong as possible, O citizens, in order that we also/even we may live by this degree better.
21. Who of us does not know that Cicero speaks much better than other orators? When Cicero speaks, there is no one who would believe that he will ever speak similarly. Therefore let that famous orator plead our case.
22. Let us trust the dutiful lieutenant who says that no war ever will be similar to that one in the province. For I think that this man has keen perception and the highest trustworthiness.
23. Why, then, is Catiline remaining with us? Either let him himself rush forth out from the city as soon as possible or let him be thrown out by the people.
24. Many men have perished in a long-standing love. For me, on the contrary, the fires (passions) were brief: I loved one girl, who was loving another man and whom I now hate most greatly.

25. Since the very good lieutenant had seen the battle line of the enemies (down) from the wall, having thought that the battle would/was going to be long and very difficult, with the highest dread dared to lead his men toward the plain. And these men first threw very many spears; then they were fighting with swords in hand.
26. Fires sent down from the sky often used to terrify the minds of mortals. And indeed many men for a long time had been believing that in this way Jupiter was accustomed to show(ing) anger to human beings.
27. Although human beings are more humble in respect to many things, in this thing they especially surpass animals: they are able to speak. In this thing first of all they are very dissimilar to animals.
28. After the very fierce battle at dawn we saw men having died on the plain, some short and small, others huge in body. And the bodies of all these men by order of the commander we carried away into the camp as soon as possible.
29. You seem to hate the bad citizens too little. Tell me, Catiline, do you love the country enough? I for my part think that you desire war among the citizens much more greatly than peace.
30. To have given aid to the homeland is a thing as great as possible. And this thing indeed Lucius did. I said to him, when he was seeking (my) advice, that the envy of a few men had to be endured since he had done a just thing for the people.
31. While fighting before the walls with fire and iron, the Roman legions very easily overcame a small band of enemies. In a brief time, moreover, the town was (being) believed to have been captured and destroyed.
32. A little before daylight the commander on the plain urged the soldiers of the first legion that they dare greater things: "While bearing the standards toward the enemies, fight much more bravely than those men. Remaining courageously in the same place, find glory and fame." With these things having been said, all men rushed forth into battle. Few indeed perished.
33. Although the leader of great boldness saved his own men from the weapons of the enemies, he nevertheless placed himself in certain danger. Alone on the plain he was fighting against an enemy; in a short time he was killed. I would be telling you more things if I knew (were knowing); but I know nothing other (nothing else) for certain.
34. The commander first reported that my brother, although he had fought very bravely against the enemies, nevertheless after a long time had fallen in the battle line with the standard of his own legion; that a spear, moreover, had been found in (his) chest.
35. That citizen, a certain Marcus, having been born from a humble place, did not dare to speak in the forum. For he was feeling that only the best men had to be heard by the people. This (citizen), in turn, was of a different opinion: he very boldly made a long indeed speech about the highest matters.
36. For a long time I was (had been being) in (respect to) (my) perceptions blind, blind, I say, about the character of Catiline; now, however, I perceive more clearly. For the highest men of our republic have shown me all true things: that that disloyal man with the worst of the citizens made a camp against the Roman people.

37. Both my and your opinions are often the same, but in this matter (they are) much different. One hope, as it seems to me, is able to save the republic: that the Roman people will be similar to the ancestors. You, however, have no hope. For you are accustomed to believe (believing) that human beings always use recklessness instead of wisdom.
38. To me while I was standing in the forum certain bad things were reported: that Caesar was lacking the loyalty of his men; that enemies had already captured the Roman camp; that many also of our men had been killed. And when these things had been heard in the senate, some men were fearing worse things, others were thinking that legates had to be sent as soon as possible in order that they might learn things.
39. Toward the altars humbly I walked, and I used a humble speech: "Jupiter, may you lead me through the weapons, through the fires into safety!" With these things having been said, I was seeking a way out from the city, which finally I found because a god was leading (me).
40. The commander, believing that enough of aid would be for all in one man, sent me alone at night into the camp of the enemies in order that I might kill their leader. As soon as possible I returned happily and reported that the thing that he had ordered had been done. I believed, however, that this joy for the army would be not long-standing.
41. It is very well known to rather wise men that many feelings, among which are love and fear and recklessness, give signs of themselves and are able to be recognized.

 11. Use my friendship as you will wish.

12. Since neither of the commanders is willing, we shall not depart out from the city.
13. Let all loyal men be willing to die for the homeland!
14. Which (one) of these two things would you prefer, friend?

Exercises, Chapter XII (pages 521-532)

- A. 1. To where did you (pl.) send the terrified boys before the battle? For (their) mothers are very miserably begging that you say whether they were carried away far from the city or not.
2. Who is there who would prefer money to friendship? Tell me whether you know a man of this kind or not.
3. Is the rumor that the Romans, who have conquered many peoples, do not want to conquer that state true? Those men desire to rule as many lands as possible, don't they?
4. There is fighting in the streets and the citizens are seeking arms. Why should we allow citizens to inflict violence on citizens? A law about violence must be passed by the fathers/senators without delay. You do not differ from this opinion, do you?
5. Who is to be/could in charge of this band of soldiers? Whom should/could we put in charge of these men? We do not know whether Caesar or Pompey is a better leader.
6. The enemies against right and what is divinely right have driven part of the citizens into slavery. We want to know what peoples in the lands/in the world are willing to endure this thing. All honorable men, at least, are asking and begging that they be freed.
7. You did hear/have heard, didn't/haven't you, the rumor going through the towns? There is certainly no doubt that it is true.
8. What should we have done about this misfortune? For we were doubting whether Caesar was sending/would send aid, and at that time we were lacking weapons with which/in order that with them we might conquer the enemies.
9. Do not, my fellow citizens, forget the brave deeds of your fathers. Remember also your own courage.
10. Should I not consider Catiline a very bad citizen, to whom nothing ever was forbidden?
11. The inhabitants of the conquered province were asking that according to custom they be presented with citizenship. You do not know, do you, why a law about conquered peoples was not passed?
12. What am I to do? That contemptible law seems to me unjust, but it is a sacrilege not to obey the laws. Therefore, I shall ask (my) father (for) advice. Whenever I desire to know the just thing, that wise man tells me.
13. I give thanks to you because the book that you sent pleases me most greatly, and there is not any gift that I would prefer to this one.
14. From where must arms be obtained by us? Should we seek aid from the same men who previously were a source of aid to us? On the contrary, let us find new allies and worthy ones!
15. That girl whom just now I loved loves another man. Now I know what love is, and no longer do I hope for a life without cares.

16. Since Caesar had been summoned by an important letter, he set out to the camp at dawn. Nevertheless he left behind two legions on the plain in order that they might complete the battle.
17. Certain captured enemies, part by/because of chance, part by/because of a plan, were freed and were able to return into the province. Whether they want to remain now at home or to seek another battle is uncertain.
18. Never shall I forget your services completed well for me and my men. May I perish when my memory of you will have fled, (you) whom I love beyond all men.
19. The leader of the enemies was wanting to know whether Caesar had made/pitched a camp in the high mountains or not. Whom of men could he have asked about these things? At that time, at least, except us there was no one.
20. You did a thing against right and what is divinely right: you tried to drive away from the altar a citizen begging the gods for aid.
21. Where, then, of peoples (Where in the world) are we to find a man of ancient virtue and trustworthiness in order that he may control the people desiring revolution?
22. You just write a long letter to me. For I want to know what is being done in the senate, what (is being done) in the forum. You will tell me, won't you, all worthy things?
23. With the war completed, Caesar put lieutenants worthy of trust in charge of two legions in the province. He himself, setting out into the territory of the allies, left the camp at night in order that the enemies might not be able to learn to where he had gone.
24. If Caesar leads his army into Italy with the senate being unwilling, he will inflict war on his fellow citizens. And although you want me to speak more about these things, senators, nevertheless I shall say nothing; I have already said more things than I wanted (to say).
25. The women captured by the enemies were killed. And this thing indeed is considered forbidden by/because of our customs. I do not doubt that very many of you prefer peace to war and arms, but on account of these very unworthy things should we not fight?
26. There was then among the citizens a certain Gaius, who by chance had found a letter sent by Catiline to the allies. And when this (letter) had been read in the presence of the senate, there was doubt whether that man would/was going to return to Rome.
27. I just now heard a rumor: that very many slaves suffering unworthy things, with (their) masters having been killed, had fled with arms into the mountains; that a leader, moreover, had been chosen by them whom they were willing to follow through every divinely right thing and (every) forbidden thing.
28. This woman had all other things except an honorable soul. For when aid was being sought by the enemies, she handed over arms in return for gold. And we indeed hope that this woman will/is going to pay the greatest penalty by order of the people.
29. Are you asking why we are giving worthy thanks to the immortal gods? They accomplished many things for us beyond hope. For when the city having been attacked for a long time was falling, they heard us quite often begging for safety, and they saved (us).
30. The consul as unworthy as possible sought a favor in the presence of the king hostile to our state, and he is refusing to admit his wicked deeds. And since these things are so, senators, should we not consider him an enemy of the republic, should we not drive (him) out from the city?

31. Catiline stood in the forum and he himself pleaded the case for himself before the people: "False is that rumor that you by chance have heard, my fellow citizens, and I have not ever tried to kill the consul. And this forbidden thing in no way would I do. If, however, I am unworthily sent into exile, to where in the lands/in the world shall I be able to go? This one thing I beg: do not (pl.) drive me from Italy."
32. When I was living in Athens, I often used to listen to a certain wise man who used to say that there were no gods except them to whom human beings were not a source of care. Even now I hold in/by memory his harsh words.
33. Certain ones from the soldiers, having been attacked through treachery, were captured in the mountains, and of those who returned to the camp there was no one of the sort who knew either from where the enemies had come or how they had been able to fight in that uneven place. Our men, however, having been moved now by anger, now by boldness, took up arms, hoped for another battle.
34. From memory, if I am able, I shall tell you (pl.) what (of a) plan the senate formed about the war among the citizens. And indeed all men had the same opinion: that those who had inflicted danger and fear on the Roman people had to be considered unworthy of citizenship.
35. Caesar urged the envoys sent by the inhabitants of the mountains that they hold in/by memory those things that he had said: "If you (pl.) want to return into favor with Caesar, why, I ask you, (are you hesitating) to set aside arms, why are you hesitating to obey the authority of the Roman people?"
36. We were being terrified by false rumors, but now with great joy you say that the commander has been saved, that the war has been completed well. No one of mortals would be able to believe you if you were not reporting the thing in such a way as you yourself saw.
37. Let us see whether this man who has been put in charge of the troops has come sufficiently prepared. For often, whenever a man not well-known is in charge of the soldiers, they are not willing to obey (his) orders.
38. If only those who know literature would tell us how and with what spirit ancient men were accustomed to consider(ing) Love the most beautiful god.

16. There is no doubt that the citizens consider the arms abandoned by the enemies of small (value).
parvī, Genitive of Indefinite Value

Exercises, Chapter XIII (pages 555-564)

- A. 1. Antony went out from the city before he heard that I had come.
Antony set out from the city before I could learn that he had come.
2. The rest (of the men) without a doubt will follow your orders provided that the light of your mind and talent and judgment lead them.
3. Unfortunate country! The danger is great apparently because depraved men are seeking arms for the purpose of inflicting violence. And indeed of such a sort will the state be as the character and zeals of (its) citizens (will be).
4. The dying son moved (his) eyes without light toward the words of (his) father: "Why, very dear one, did you not flee before you received these so many wounds? If only I were able to exchange my life so unpleasant for yours/your (life), at least!"
5. Not well enough did we understand the words of that soldier having come out from the camp of the enemies. Therefore let us ask him for how great a price he bought his own freedom. Was he estimating the rest of the wretched captured men at no value?

6. Go out from the city, Catiline, before you can be led to a worthy punishment. For what (of) evil or (of) crime is able to be pondered (of the sort) that you yourself did not do?
7. With many wounds both having been inflicted and received, still there was fighting. As long as anger and the day remained, we killed all the enemies to the one (to a man). When, however, night came, we began to depart out from the plain.
8. At that time Caesar led his men into the territory of the enemies. Not at all indeed having delayed, the savage king began to seek allies and weapons for the purpose of waging war. And indeed he was reckoning the rest of things at no value provided that the Romans not conquer the province.
9. Our men occupied the mountain for so long as they were able to endure that unpleasant task. At dawn, however, that place was abandoned before it could be understood by the enemies that a camp was being made on that very mountain.
10. The brave woman proceeds toward cruel war bearing arms. And she indeed fights with a sword as well as the men (fight).
11. At the foot of the mountain we were waiting until we saw him walking toward us who had been sent for the purpose of leading us home.
12. I was wanting to know what sort of and how many men had come to the temple for the sake of seeking aid from the gods.
13. Begin, small boy, to recognize your father and mother. For now they call you a son most pleasing, (you) having been waited for for so long a time.
14. Marcus Antonius was trying to kill as many enemies as he was able in one day apparently because he was believing that such (a sort of) violence and courage would be pleasing to cruel Mars and to the rest of the gods.
15. Before you went away to war, of how happy a mind you were! How many happy words you often said! How much now you have been changed from that friend well known by me!
16. Since so many well-known men have now been killed, we have lost the lights of our state. So, moreover, we are beginning to wander as blind men without a leader.
17. The king, apparently because poems were so pleasing to him, wanted to buy the friendship of the poet, but the poet refused to sell his (friendship) to the king.
18. Why, I ask you, are you delaying ruinously in this unpleasant love? That wound of yours, believe me, will soon bring death.
19. Apparently because they were especially fearing wounds inflicted by savage enemies, many of the soldiers fled before the battle was begun. Men lacking courage!
20. The senators estimated so many and so great crimes of the consul of small value apparently because they themselves had done the same things for the sake of taking power.
21. I am giving you all my good things/goods for the purpose of selling provided indeed that you not sell them for less value than I bought (them). This thing also remember: in buying and selling things that sort of thing that has been done must be followed more (greatly) than that sort of thing that has been said.

22. Should we endure the crimes, senators, of those to whom, with a price having been received, it is a custom to sell all things worthy and honorable?
23. What was the reason why you were wanting to sell that house for much more than it was being estimated? Was it so pleasing to you?
24. The thing that you said before in no way did you change. But since I had been asked, I began to change my plan. Neither of us wanted to exchange good things for worse things.
25. To us asking many things a certain soldier just now having come out from the province reported that the war that our men had begun was not able to be completed without the aid of the allies; that the commander, moreover, would delay until troops were/should be sent from the city.
26. Boldly he proceeded toward the plain: by order of the commander he stood in arms and waited until a place of fighting should be found.
27. All men understand, Marcus Tullius, that you have come into the senate for the sake of speaking, not (for the sake of) listening. And this thing is a thing not unpleasant. Speak, therefore, for as long as you (will) want. Begin!
28. Although I had accomplished many things for the sake of your honor, nevertheless you reckoned my loyalty of very little value until you, having been abandoned by friends, had a need of safety and advice.

Exercises, Chapter XIV (pages 581-592)

- A.
1. Does anyone love him? Not to anyone is he dear.
 2. Some man said that you had a need for something. You do not want anything, do you?
 3. If I had/were having any authority, you would not be being pressed hard by anyone.
 4. He has something of courage, but from some cause/for some reason he is fleeing.
 5. Here there is present a man of some honor. And indeed he has more (of) honor than anyone.
 6. Each soldier, unless he receives some wound, will fight for a longer time.
 7. To each man his own deeds are the greatest.
 8. Let each best man/all the best men look toward the rising sun.
 9. All men were fearing the harsh leader, and not anyone out from so great a throng was daring to approach him. So great was the authority of that man.
 10. Since the soul departs from the body of each dying man, not anything of sensation is able to exist after death, is it?
 11. No one is so wicked that he would be absent from the temple when the citizens are begging for favor before the faces of the gods.

12. Not at all would I compare your very happy day with my most unfortunate one. For while I was being driven into exile, it happened that you were becoming consul. Each of us had his own fortune.
13. It was the custom among certain peoples that they always had two kings, in name more (greatly) than in power.
14. Through the plain was going a very long line, which I was observing down from the wall. How readily I was remembering the old war although I had been worn out by age!
15. I came to Athens, and not anyone there greeted me. Many men were asking me (my) name and homeland. Finally it was necessary to answer.
16. It was (being) proper for the wise consul to seek not someone good, but the best man, the most honorable, the bravest. And indeed he was hesitating to put Antonius in charge of any legion; and indeed this man, as they used to say, feared even his own shadow.
17. Caesar was unwilling to delay because he was perceiving how much already of authority the enemies, with one battle completed, were having among the inhabitants of the province. Therefore he ordered that with the sun having risen they be attacked in their own camp.
18. We were being pressed hard by so many cares and misfortunes at Rome that we (actually) went with friends to the country; and from this place all dangers were absent. If only it had been permitted to remain in the city!
19. It often happens that I am not able to say (my) true opinion. But if you ask me quite often, you will easily see on (my) face what I feel.
20. The savage king before the battle ordered those men about to fight that not anyone capture anyone living: "Give all enemies to death. But if that thing is not possible, (give to death) as many as possible."
21. With the sun having risen, you thought that a way through the mountains not at all with difficulty would be found by our soldiers. It is possible that you made a mistake.
22. I have found, if it is divinely right, a way that may (in order that it may) return her to me or that may make an end of loving. For than this one girl the sun has seen not anything more unworthy.
23. Romulus surpassed all other men in authority and in age. So he always conducted himself for the people that no one did not praise him, no one did not love (him).
24. In that place there was present a poet of famous name who was singing of the wandering moon and the labors of the sun and the night and the rising signs of the night. When, however, he had begun to sing of Troy falling, loyal Aeneas was very much moved when the name of Troy had been heard. For to that place neither the old honor was any longer remaining nor the glory of the old kings.
25. Not without some hope the boy is going out to battle bearing the face and arma of a man. When the leader asks who he is and how much of age he has, he sets aside (his) arms, dares not at all to say anything.
26. After the brave commander greatly encouraged his men, calling each man by name, he fell, unlucky, conquered by a huge wound. All the soldiers after these things fought with the highest courage for the remaining part of the day. Beneath the moon they happily saw the withdrawing columns of the enemies.

27. With the battle completed, it was reported to Caesar that scarcely any soldier was remaining without a wound. And indeed so many had fallen that it was necessary to make one legion from two.
 28. Often old things are praised and are preferred to new things. We have forgotten scarcely anything of the ancient custom, and not ever are the ancestors absent from minds for us (from our minds).
 29. The peoples that had been conquered by war were fearing the name and power of absent Pompey; (the peoples), in turn, that had remained in the old friendship, to them not at all ever was there fear.
 30. There is no one who would be able to bring (it) about that peace be made among all nations. For it is characteristic of each man to desire to oppress other men with power.
 31. Not at all would anyone be able to make one state from men so different in law and custom. Not even Romulus without war and weapons brought together peoples differing so much.
 32. After the war was begun, the minds for the citizens changed to so great an extent that each man (actually) was willing to give for the homeland that which was remaining of life and of strength.
 33. By chance it happened that Caesar was forming a plan about war at the same time at which the allies were setting out for the purpose of bringing arms.
 34. It happened that within one night all the women of the town were carried away. And these women easily, since all (their) husbands had been brought together in the temple for the purpose of seeking aid from the gods, had been captured by the enemies.
 35. So much was Antonius oppressed by fear—a thing that is accustomed to happen(ing) even to brave men—that he was hardly able to speak before the senators. For many days after this (thing) he was absent from the senate, and he was not able to be seen even in the forum.
 36. Scarcely had the columns gone out from the camp when the commander ordered (them) to return to the same place. For lieutenants of great trustworthiness were present for the purpose of warning about hidden dangers. And indeed the more things he learned from them, the more greatly he was fearing. Therefore he prepared to lead the troops into the mountains a little before daylight.
 37. If anything (of) new happens, see to (it) that I know without delay. But if the mind to you is pressed hard by cares, also about these things write to me.
 38. Suns are able to set and to return. When (our) brief light will have died/dies, one night finally will press us hard.
 39. With the sun rising, the awaited day was present. When the men and boys began to go out from the houses, the mothers, to whom war was always a source of hatred, pressed to (their) breasts (their) sons and were begging that they themselves not be left behind.

Exercises, Chapter XV (pages 617-625)

- A.
1. The orator was so regretting (his) harsh words against Cicero that he fled as swiftly as possible out from the senate, where he had made a speech.
 2. I was pitying that soldier whom heavy weapons were impeding. And indeed he was not able to block the attacking enemies.
 3. Who is there in the whole world who would not fear this man, the cause and head of all evils/evil things?
 4. I was greatly fearing that the farmer of old character had been carried off by suffering and harsh death. I was hoping, however, that (his) soul, having been released from (his) body, was still living.
 5. I am dutiful Aeneas, famous through the world, and I bear with myself the gods of (my) homeland torn away from the enemies. For these (gods) I desire to establish a new home, but some scarcely (badly) friendly divine spirit forbids me.
 6. For a long time the populace had been desiring to hear the sweet name of peace. The senators therefore, with a day having been decided, called the envoys to the plain, made an end of war.
 7. "What god are you? What divine spirit? For in fact not at all do you have the face of a human being." Scarcely had I said these things when I recognized Mercury through the shadows.
 8. This one thing I was fearing: that I would not be able to return home before (my) father of great age could depart from life. And indeed it was (being) especially important to me to hear the words of this very dear man.
 9. If anyone had tried to prevent me from returning home, swiftly I would have seized a sword with (my) hand for the purpose of fighting.
 10. Night was surrounding the head for me (my head) with shadows; and this thing entirely prevented me from approaching the walls.
 11. All good men greatly regret the fact that you were prevented, Marcus Antonius, from surrounding the mountain with troops.
 12. Nothing was able to prevent the enemies from carrying off the daughter of the king, whom now it is necessary to free at a great price.

13. Aeneas walks toward the altar, bearing gifts. With a humble voice, moreover, he says such things: "Great gods—if you have any divine power—snatch me and my men away from these evils/evil things!"
 14. The queen is moved by savage anger in (her) mind and face. To a certain soldier chosen for this purpose she says that (her) son must be killed and that it is not important to her whether he falls by an enemy in a battle line or because of some misfortune in the forum. These very words she says: "You just see to it that he is killed."
 15. It used to be important to our commander to surround the city with walls. With this work having been completed, he set up the legions in a battle line.
 16. Having changed (his) expression and face, Cupid, a great and having to be feared divine power, comes to Carthage where/in order that there he may overpower the queen with sweet love.
 17. "Your sweet homeland before all things forbids you to depart with so many fleeing men." Having said these things and such things, (my) father hindered me from doing a thing so serious, so shameful.
 18. With the city of the enemies having been entirely surrounded by our men, let the altars of the gods be surrounded with honors in such a way that the deeds of men please the divine spirits. Let all the gods and goddesses, moreover, perceive that men estimate their aid of very much value.
 19. Your excellence Rumor, than whom nothing is swifter, will bear through the world, through the peoples, and not anything will hinder us from praising your brave deeds.
 20. Was it possible that a fear of death was shamefully hindering you from snatching (your) friend away from the hands of the enemies? Unlucky man! I pity you much.
 21. Although I was a small boy, nevertheless I was wanting to gird arms on myself in order that I might fight on behalf of the sweet homeland. (My) father, however, whom certainly I was respecting, forbade me.
 22. The fact that that brother of yours decided to sell (his) honor for gold disgusts you, does it not? And indeed he told me myself that what I felt was not important to him. Was money of so great value to him?
 23. Caesar not at all prevented the envoys from speaking. And indeed he ordered them that they report to himself without delay all the things that they had learned.
