100 Years of Yale Younger Poets
Edited by Carl Phillips

“In the annals of publishing there is surely no comparable record of hospitality to poets, young or old.” —The New York Times

Celebrating the one-hundredth anniversary of the Yale Younger Poets prize, this collection includes work by such illustrious figures as Muriel Rukeyser, Adrienne Rich, John Ashbery, Carolyn Forché, and Robert Hass and features an illuminating introduction on the history of the prize within the broader context of American poetry.

The Solace Is Not the Lullaby

Jill Osier

The 2020 Yale Younger Poet

This collection brings poems of quiet attention, poems of precision and restraint. Series judge and award-winning poet Carl Phillips notes, “Osier’s is a sensibility unlike any I’ve encountered before—the poems here are thrilling, and strangely new.”

The Year of Blue Water

Yanyi; Foreword by Carl Phillips

The 2019 Yale Younger Poet

Yanyi’s arresting and straightforward poems weave experiences of immigration as a Chinese American, of racism, of mental wellness, and of gender from a queer and trans perspective. Foregrounding the power of friendship, Yanyi’s poetry inspires attention, clarity, and hope through artmaking and community.

Anger
The Conflicted History of an Emotion
Barbara H. Rosenwein
Taking the story of anger from the Buddha to Twitter, Barbara H. Rosenwein explores the many conflicting ways it has been viewed and expressed, its questionable connection with violence, and the limitations of its now ascendant scientific interpretations. Rosenwein shows that anger’s history can help us grapple with it today.

Standing for Reason
The University in a Dogmatic Age

John Sexton; With a Foreword by Gordon Brown

John Sexton explores how our universities might function as a “sacred space” for dialogue and, as such, how they might serve as an antidote to the “secular dogmatism” that infects our society. Then he charts how they might go further to become agents creating a world where “secular ecumenism” thrives.
